

Dear Mr. Moyer;

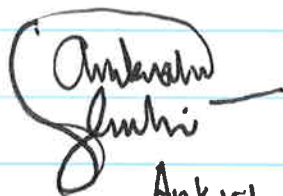

Many great baseball players play solely for themselves; they play for a World Series ring, or for money. I believe these people have no place in modern society when their only goals are for themselves. Yet a great baseball player and a human being like you should be recognized, for the way he uses baseball as a tool. I have great respect for you and aspire to be like you, not only because of your great pitching ability and baseball immortality, but how you influence the lives of unfortunate children.

I play for the Vienna Little League Yankees (majors). Our fall ball coach asked us to donate to your foundation in lieu of a Coach's gift. My family is not the wealthiest, but my parents instill in me to give back to the community. I wanted to make a difference by donating money to your foundation by raking and bagging leaves in our neighborhood for over a week. The donation I have made to your foundation may not be a lot of money, but just enough to put a smile on a child's face, who has been living with an unimaginable burden. We turn to you and the many volunteers who want to make a difference in the lives of children for a helping hand; we identify Camp Erin, the largest network of bereavement camps in the country, for children or teens who suffer significant losses. Camp Mariposa provides comfort for children affected by addiction in their families. Once again, a true heroic player in my eyes, is not only one who succeeds on the field, but one who wins hearts and smiles off the field, not solely by who they are, but who they make people into.

Thank you for all you do to make the world a better place for those who suffer.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Ankush Joshi". The signature is written in black ink and is positioned above the printed name.

Ankush Joshi

P.S. I hope you fully recover from your surgery so I can see you pitch against the Washington Nationals.